

Rebisco

HISTORY

On August 15, 1963, Rebisco started as a neighborhood bakeshop named "England Biscuit Factory" in old San Juan, Philippines.

From its humble beginnings, Rebisco created products with high quality standards. Over the years, it built an impressive portfolio of great-tasting snack food for everyone's delight.

Growing steadily, the company had to move from San Juan to Novaliches, Quezon City to operate in a more spacious factory.

In 1972, It acquired a new home, becoming the Republic Biscuit Corporation that we know today.

Starting with well-loved crackers and biscuit sandwiches, Rebisco's line up has grown to include nuts and seeds, cakes, chocolates, wafers, chips, curls, candies and ice cream.

Today, the Rebisco Group of Food Companies is true to its claim of providing the best-value products by maintaining quality at par with the best in the industry.

Every product that leaves a Rebisco plant is put under strict quality control to reach local and global consumers at its finest taste.

With the strong position of Rebisco Group in its home market, the company has now set its sights internationally.

Through the company's Export Group, foreign distributors are able to avail of a "one-stop-shop" service that provides access to all the products under the Rebisco Group of Food Companies.

Today, the Export Group is in partnership with several distributors from East Asia, South East Asia, South Asia, Oceania, Americas Middle East, Europe, and Africa.
